Lethbridge 1891

Lethbridge was a busy little place in 1891.

The settlement – just six years old – became a town, with Charles A. Magrath the first mayor. It went through a variety of growing pains, with definite lines between the various social classes in the community.

Sir Alexander Galt and his son, Elliott T. Galt, were mining coal from the Belly River valley just below Lethbridge, and shipping it east to Medicine Hat or south to Great Falls, Mont., on a rail line they had built the year before.

Through their companies, the Galts provided several hundred jobs. They also provided, in one way or another, most of the social amenities. The four-block town square, now known as Galt Gardens, and the new hospital were just two of the Galt-provided features that made the town habitable.

By 1891, Lethbridge was starting to take the shape it retains to this day.

1891 day-by-day

This is a day-by-day account of life in Lethbridge in 1891. Much of the information came from the old Lethbridge News, the first newspaper published in the community.

During 1891, the News had at least three different editors, and the quality and comprehensiveness of the reporting changed with each change in staffing. In general, the newspapers in the early months of the year had far more news than the ones that were published later.

The News rarely used first names, and often ignored key points in stories – in the apparent assumption that everyone in town would know the details anyway.

Thursday, January 1

The new year started with a heat wave – the temperature hit 46 degrees – but the talk in Lethbridge was about politics, not the weather.

A poll conducted by returning officer Stephen Alexander showed 142 people wanted the young community organized as a town. Only four were opposed.

The results of the vote were sent to the lieutenant governor of the North West Territories, who had the power to proclaim the new town.

A major project drew to a close as 1890 ended. John Kean and James Ritchie completed their contract for supplying ties to the Alberta Railway and Coal Co. About 45 men had worked bringing 54,000 ties and 44,000 mining props from the North Kootenay Pass.

Friday, January 2

Charles F.P. Conybeare was elected by acclamation to the board of the school district. Several others who had been nominated at the annual ratepayers' meeting withdrew when Conybeare entered the race. He succeeded Robert Niven, and joined Hugh McBeth and William Colpman on the board.

Average daily attendance during 1890 had been 75.4 students, although the school board owned only 65 desks. Rev. Charles McKillop, the school inspector, rated the board's work as excellent.

Saturday, January 3

Lawyer William Galliher was recovering after being thrown from his horse on New Year's Eve. The lawyer suffered several serious cuts to his face and head and was unconscious for a couple of hours.

Sunday, January 4

People strolled around the town without overcoats, and it seemed to be more like April than January. The temperature went well above freezing.

Monday, January 5

As the heat wave continued, several young men played football in the town square.

Staff members at Henry Bentley's general store were busy stock-taking. The business had been dissolved, by mutual consent of the partners, but was carrying on as usual.

Tuesday, January 6

A dray team belonging to Sam Davis' livery stable ran away after being left untied. The team ran up Redpath Street, turned down Round and Ford streets, then hit the brick wall of Sam Brady's bakery. The end of the wagon tongue went through the wall, but the horses weren't hurt.

The Lethbridge News published its first issue under a new name, Semi-Weekly News. "The first and chief object of the News will be to work for the advancement of the interests of Lethbridge and its individual citizens," the paper's editorial said.

Wednesday, January 7

The public school started the new year in a new two-storey brick building. The day was spent classifying the children and assigning lessons. Principal Bruce Latimer and teachers Alex Dove and Lena Simpson had appealed to Lethbridge residents to be sure their children were in class so they would be thoroughly organized for the start of the term.

Elliott T. Galt, general manager of the Alberta Railway and Coal Co., bought the old school building and divided it into rooms and offices for rental.

Rev. Charles McKillop urged the annual meeting of Knox Church to secure additional seating, as attendance at evening services was now 180 to 200. Morning services were drawing 80 to 100. At the meeting, James Price, Alex Dove, Joe Dalzell and George Elliott were elected ushers.

Thursday, January 8

Rev. Robert Halsall led the United Christian Endeavor Society's meeting in the Presbyterian Church. Eternal punishment was the topic.

Lucy Bailey was elected president of the Ladies' Aid Society of Knox Church. Margaret Jardine was elected vice-president, Elizabeth McKillop secretary-treasurer, and Elizabeth Fraser superintendent of sewing.

H.B. Rose, a merchant tailor from Winnipeg, was in Lethbridge looking for a location for a store. He said he would move from Winnipeg because of the prosperity of Lethbridge.

William McArthur was looking for business for his new grocery store north of the railroad track. He promised customers he would keep a full supply of the choicest groceries on hand at all times.

Friday, January 9

The North Western Coal and Navigation Co. offered for sale or lease 40,000 acres of choice grazing lands. Charles A. Magrath, the company's agent, said the land was in blocks of townships, well-watered and within easy reach of Lethbridge, in the Milk River Ridge area. Small parcels for farming, as well as Lethbridge town lots, were also available.

Saturday, January 10

Sunday, January 11

John McNaughton, who ran a fruit and news stand on Round Street next to Lethbridge House, died at the age of 66. McNaughton was one of the pioneers of Lethbridge, having set up a stationery store in 1884. His news depot and fruit store also featured pipes, tobacco, sporting goods, and Singer sewing machines.

His brother, Capt. J.R. McNaughton, also lived in Lethbridge.

Bishop Pinkham, of the diocese of Calgary and Saskatchewan, preached in St. Augustine's Anglican Church. He also held a confirmation service, with the rite of confirmation administered to six girls and three boys.

Monday, January 12

High winds could have caused serious problems at the bottom of the incline railway, which carried coal and people from the river valley to the townsite above. A shack near the railway caught fire, and men working on the incline rushed to put it out. The AR&C's hay and stables were in danger until the blaze was brought under control.

Miner Pete Nenish suffered a dislocated shoulder and a sprained ankle when a large piece of coal fell on him while he worked in the mines.

The Catholic school opened, with two teachers in charge.

Tuesday, January 13

A concert was held in the barracks, with proceeds going for fencing at the Lethbridge Protestant cemetery.

North West Mounted Police Corp. R.G. Matthews opened the show with The Red, White and Blue. Anna Godwin then sang two songs, The Better Land and I Remember The Old Familiar Faces. John Curry, Norman Macleod, and W.J. Cleveland also sang. Enid Martin and Lily Deane performed a scene from The Mikada. The concert ended with an operetta, The Pedlar, played by Ida Conybeare, Anna Godwin, Margaret Jardine, Norman Macleod, and Sgt. W.J. Cleveland. Mrs. Neales played the piano accompaniments throughout the evening.

Wednesday, January 14

A meeting in the Methodist Church discussed the possibility of forming a temperance society. The meeting, chaired by Rev. J.F. Pritchard, resolved that a lodge of the Royal Templars of Temperance be organized. The meeting was held just two weeks after a vote on prohibition showed 143 favoured liquor by license – and only two wanted prohibition.

Thursday, January 15

The lieutenant governor proclaimed town status for the community of Lethbridge.

Sam Horner and Henry Hutchinson, saddlers and harness makers, completed a contract of three sets of heavy horse harness for the North West Mounted Police. The harness, of oak tanned leather with solid brass fittings, were sent to the NWMP's G Division, based at Fort Saskatchewan.

Friday, January 16

I.G. Baker and Co. announced plans for a large stone store on the site of the existing wooden building. The old store would be moved to the rear of the lot to be used as a warehouse.

It was one of several major construction projects in the community.

William Henderson's Lethbridge House was undergoing extensive repairs, being plastered throughout.

Material for a new opera house was being placed on the ground to prepare for the start of work in the spring.

And Joseph Ritchie was building a two-storey store on Redpath Street.

Saturday, January 17

A brakeman working on the Great Falls and Canada Railway was the prime suspect when a commercial traveller reported $200 was missing. The brakeman had been seen picking up money in the dining room of the hotel where the businessman was registered.

The brakeman had taken the afternoon train south, but made it across the border before he could be stopped.

Lawyer Charles C. McCaul was unanimously elected chairman of the board of the new Lethbridge Electric Light and Waterworks Co., with Charles A. Magrath secretary. Plans called for an electric light system in place by spring, and waterworks in operation by the following winter.

Thomas Rookes, formerly of Brandon, accepted the job of managing Lethbridge House. In 1884, Rookes had been one of the first residents of Lethbridge.

MP D.W. Davis and MLA F.W.G. Haultain ended a brief visit to Lethbridge when they left on the morning stage to Fort Macleod.

Sunday, January 18

Rev. J.F. Pritchard told the members of his congregation at St. Augustine's Church that they would need to co-operate to make the church self-sustaining. He said members must take a personal interest in its success.

At Knox Church, meanwhile, a minister from Niagara Falls, Ont., spoke on the values of temperance.

Monday, January 19

Many complaints were being made about the condition of Telegraph Hill, on the west side of the Belly River. "There is very large traffic along the Macleod Trail and immediate steps should be taken to make this part of it passable," the News said. The newspaper compared a ride down the hill to a ride in a runaway train.

Tuesday, January 20

Charles A. Magrath, saying it was the duty of every citizen of Lethbridge to come forward when called, declared he would run for mayor.

He had been presented with a petition signed by almost 200 people, including John Kean, William Stafford, Robert Sherlock, William Henderson, John D. Higinbotham, John H. Cavanah, Morris Barford, Thomas McCaugherly, William Lyall, Lawrence McEwan, John Craig, Rev. Charles McKillop, R. Burton Deane, Fred Champness, William Grist and Arthur J. Hipperson.

Wednesday, January 21

Thirty young men met to discuss forming an amateur athletic club, and 25 of them agreed to become members at $5 a year.

William Galliher and William Colpman were appointed to secure memberships, while Galliher, Charles Williamson and one of the McNabbs were to ask E.T. Galt for space in the old school building for the club's use.

Thursday, January 22

Druggist John D. Higinbotham was settling in at Alder Allen, his new home at Redpath Street and Westminster Road. The home, in the pointed Gothic and Queen Anne style of architecture, was designed by architects from Toronto. George Cody had the contract for the woodwork, and Arthur Hipperson did the plumbing. The house, built for $4,200, had 16 rooms, including a library and a butler's pantry.

Daniel Roderick McKay, a conductor, married Sarah Miller of Lethbridge at the home of the groom's father. Rev. Charles McKillop officiated.

Friday, January 23

William Stafford entered the race for mayor after receiving a petition signed by 220 working men. Just days before, Stafford had signed the petition backing Charles Magrath. He said, however, he felt it was his duty to run after getting such strong support.

Members of Lethbridge Lodge No. 2 of IOOF gathered at Clark House for a grand oyster supper. After consuming the bill of fare, the members engaged in toasts, speech and song, until calling it quits at about 11 p.m. with Auld Lang Syne.

Saturday, January 24

William Stafford withdrew from the mayoralty race. He told a meeting of workmen in boarding house No. 2 that he had discovered he would not be eligible because he lived outside the area to be incorporated. He said, however, he would like to see a council include representatives of the mines, the railway, the north end of town, the centre, and the south end.

Ticket agent Herbert Martin, who said he would seek election as an alderman, told the meeting he did not like to see a line drawn between the businessmen and the working people.

William McArthur said the working men should co-operate to secure the rights, justice and fair play to which they were entitled. The working men who worked eight hours a day for $1.50 to $2.50 were the "bone and sinew of Lethbridge", he said, and should support the people who would guard their rights.

Charles Payne of Russell House offered the first in a series of select oyster suppers. About 20 people attended the feast.

Sunday, January 25

W.K. Flowerel, a rancher from Helena, Mont., was in Lethbridge to settle claims resulting from straying cattle the year before. Cattle belonging to Flowerel had strayed into the Lethbridge area and destroyed a considerable quantity of hay. The News noted that this was an honorable act, because it was not likely damages could have been recovered through the legal process. Flowerel paid out $665, including $100 to W.D. Whitney, $90 to S.H. Davis, $125 to M.I. McCaugherty, $270 to Norris and Banning, $60 to J.R. Davis, J. Howard, Charles Brown and W.H. Brown, and $20 to Charles Ross.

Monday, January 26

Charles A. Magrath became the first mayor by acclamation. He was proposed and seconded by Joseph F. Ritchie and John D. Higinbotham. Magrath, who was barely in his 30s, had studied surveying and civil engineering at McGill University in Montreal. He came west in 1877 to work on topographical surveys.

In 1885, he moved to Lethbridge as surveyor and land commissioner for the North West Coal and Navigation Co. He was the first president of the board of trade in 1889.

For council, there were 13 candidates: merchant John H. Cavanah, William Colpman, C.M. Turner, William Henderson, Malcolm McKenzie, Robert Niven Sr., Henry Bentley, Herbert Martin, Nathan Wallwork, Thomas Curry, John Bruce, Job Reed, and Tom McNabb.

Dr. P.F. Size, a surgeon dentist from Calgary, arrived to practice for a week at Lethbridge House. Residents of the community urged him to make Lethbridge his permanent home, because it needed a dentist.

Tuesday, January 27

James Ritchie said in a letter to the News that any Indian seen drinking beer within town limits should be forced to spend the next two weeks cleaning out water closets. He also asked that a public school board meeting be held the following week so he could give his thoughts on how it should operate.

The post office, under John D. Higinbotham, became a Post Office Savings Bank. The move gave working men a place to deposit their savings.

Wednesday, January 28

Essie Nolan and J.D. Smythe, who worked at I.G. Baker and Co., were married at the Roman Catholic Church at 10 a.m. with Father Leonard Van Tighem officiating. Aurelia Roberge and Jennie Nolan were the bridesmaids, and H. Miron supported the groom at the altar. The wedding breakfast followed at the home of Nolan's sister, Ann Gay, on Redpath Street.

Robert Sage was elected secretary of the AR&C's Library and Reading Room Association, replacing C.P.L. Fowler. The library was open from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. each evening, and from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Sundays.

Thursday, January 29

The last meeting of the United Christian Endeavor Society was held, with a talk by Mr. Turner on sowing the seed. In the future, each church in Lethbridge was to have its own branch.

Friday, January 30

Eli Hodder and E.C. Wilson went hunting in the river valley, but didn't find any game. Wilson's dogs, however, did. They returned home an hour after the hunters, with their bodies covered in porcupine quills.

Saturday, January 31

A general meeting of miners was held at 7 p.m. to discuss municipal matters and appoint workers for the election. The miners met in the carpenters' shop near the top of the No. 1 shaft.

Members of the Jim Crow Club also met, at the Crow's Nest, to arrange the club's votes in the municipal election.

Sunday, February 1

Sleigh bells were heard in Lethbridge for the first time that winter. The balmy weather had ended the night before, with the temperature dropping to 16 degrees below zero. Three inches of snow fell.

John Gurn opened his Winnipeg Restaurant on Redpath Street west, next to Rowe's livery barn. Gurn, who had been a chef at Winnipeg hotels and clubs for 11 years, announced he would cater to the wants of the public in a first-class style.

Monday, February 2

The mines were closed to allow workers to vote for the new council. The school was closed because the building was being used for voting.

John Henry Cavanah topped the aldermanic poll, drawing 223 votes. Cavanah, a native of Ontario, had moved to Lethbridge in 1885 to open a general store.

Henry Bentley, another native of Ontario, came second with 207 votes. He had also arrived in 1885 to start a general store.

William Colpman, who lived in the Battleford area before moving to Lethbridge in 1885, drew 169 votes. Colpman, born in Leicestershire, England, had a lumber business. At 28, he was the youngest member of the new council.

Charles Turner, who placed fourth with 152 votes, was in charge of the AR&C's telegraph line between Great Falls and Dunmore. The Ontario native represented the north ward.

Tom Curry, who drew 142 votes, had been general manager of the I.G. Baker store since September, 1885. He was originally from Ireland.

William Henderson, a native of Edinburgh, Scotland, took 140 votes and the sixth spot on council. He settled in Lethbridge in 1883, and ran Lethbridge House and a building contracting firm.

Tuesday, February 3

Mayor Charles A. Magrath told council it was a red-letter day for the youngest town in the North West Territories. "Who has not unbounded faith in her future?" he asked. Magrath suggested several committees be formed, with one of the council's first acts the appointment of officers – including a clerk, treasurer, and assessor – to help it govern.

Joseph F. Ritchie, a Dominion land surveyor, asked the News to make it clear he was not the same Ritchie who had written to the newspaper the week before.

Wednesday, February 4

John Kean secured a contract to cut 30,000 mining props for the AR&C. Contract price was 85 cents per hundred.

Ernest Taaffe, a clothier from Winnipeg, arrived. He secured space in the Ritchie block, formerly used as a real estate office, for a store to open March 1.

Ed Higinbotham suffered several cuts on his head, shoulders and back in a railway accident near Schreiber, Ont. He had been returning to Lethbridge from a trip to Guelph, where he and his brother John had lived before moving to Lethbridge.

Thursday, February 5

W.L. Ogle of the Gutta Percha Rubber and Manufacturing Co. in Toronto, was the first salesman to try his luck with the new council. He wanted to sell the town a double cylindrical standard chemical engine. The firefighter, he said, would be able to play a continuous steam of chemical compound on a fire, and would be suitable for a town without a water system for fighting fires.

Friday, February 6

A party at The Warren, the home of Charles F.P. and Ida Conybeare, wound up in the wee hours. About 40 people attended. The Conybeares' social evenings, which included music for dancing, were always thoroughly enjoyed.

The managers of the Presbyterian Church met to discuss the possibility of erecting a new building.

Saturday, February 7

A new vertical steam engine and boiler manufactured by the John Doty Engine Co. of Toronto was put into service at the News office. The old engine was too small, so a three-horsepower one was brought in its place.

Sunday, February 8

A woman created a bit of a stir when she arrived in Lethbridge and claimed to be the first wife of a prominent local businessman. She said she had been deserted in Ballymoney, County Antrim, Ireland about eight years earlier – with new children, one less than a year old. She promised she would go away if the man she claimed was her husband – living in Lethbridge with a new wife – would provide money for herself and her children.

Monday, February 9

A concert in the messroom at the NWMP barracks raised $95 for Father Lacombe, who said the money would be turned over to the Sisters of the Convent. The concert was basically the same as one given earlier in Macleod, and most of the performers were from there. Advance tickets for the concert cost 50 cents, and reserved seating cost 75 cents.

A daughter, Julia, was born to Alister and Christina Pryce.

Tuesday, February 10

E.C. Wilson, a resident of Macleod and Lethbridge for seven years, left for California. He had sold his drug and stationery business to Joshua Little. A few days before he left, Wilson was honored with a banquet by members of the Lethbridge Gun Club.

The News said J.F. Guerin, a dental surgeon, would revisit Lethbridge. "For the convenience of those who cannot call in the day time, Mr. Guerin will use the electric light for night operations."

Wednesday, February 11

William Spencer was named town clerk and assessor at a salary of $200 a year. William Galihier was named town solicitor and treasurer. Town council made the appointments in a meeting held in a vacant room in the school. Council had free use of the room as long as it paid for the extra caretaking duties that resulted.

Thursday, February 12

Elliott T. Galt was appointed president of Lethbridge Electric Light and Waterworks Co., with Charles F.P. Conybeare named vice-president and Charles C. McCaul secretary-treasurer.

Dan McInnis of the No. 1 shaft left on a business trip to Cape Breton.

Friday, February 13

Shop hands at the No. 1 shaft practiced their football skills at noon, as they had for several days. They were preparing to challenge merchants of Round Street.

Saturday, February 14

H.G. Walsh of the Bell Telephone Co. in Winnipeg arrived to make the final arrangements to start service in Lethbridge. Most equipment had already arrived, with the exception of a few poles. About 50 subscribers were expected. A separate wire from Central to each subscriber was planned – almost 27 miles in total.

Sunday, February 15

Rev. Charles McKillop of the Presbyterian Church preached a special sermon on lying. He said it had come to his attention that several men who had voted in the municipal election were actually not entitled to do so. His sermon contained a special reference to the nature of the oath.

Monday, February 16

Payday at the mine. The total amount paid out was more than $50,000, handed out to 588 men working the mines and 398 others working in the railway and work shops. Several miners drew more than $100 for the month, with two getting $117 each.

Tuesday, February 17

Thomas Kirkham called a meeting of the Lethbridge Turf Association, which was building a track just north of the Dunmore railway line about two miles east of Lethbridge. Directors elected were George Young, Howell Harris, G. Tuttle, blacksmith Albert Keyes, John Bright, Henry Bentley, G. Patrick, Thomas Kirkham, William Galliher and Frank Colpman.

A bit of entertainment in the evening led to appearances in police barracks court two days later. Five people were fined for being drunk and disorderly, and had to pay fines ranging from $5 to $20, plus costs.

Wednesday, February 18

Calgary Mayor James Reilly, a candidate in the federal election, came to Lethbridge to declare the town would get full justice if he became MP. But D.W. Davis, the incumbent, was also at the meeting, and said he had heard no reason why Reilly should be elected rather than himself. Harry King stood up to say Lethbridge should support Davis.

John Craig, furniture dealer and undertaker, announced plans for a new store at the corner of Smith and Ford streets. The building would have a two-storey front and three-storey rear.

Thursday, February 19

Eighteen couples took horse sleighs to a surprise party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Davis, about four miles down the Belly River from Lethbridge. The party, featuring the sounds of a string band, lasted until 2 a.m.

The library held a special auction of 1890 periodicals and newspapers.

Friday, February 20

Town council set fees for business licences, including $100 for transient traders; $20 for a bowling alley with one alley, and $10 for each additional alley; $14 for single drays and $20 for double drays; $50 for livery stables; and $10 for water carts.

Saturday, February 21

Miners Frank Crawford and Angus Corrigan, from Nova Scotia, learned that their brothers had been killed in the Springhill mine disaster.

Sunday, February 22

No services were held at St. Augustine's Church. The caretaker arrived too late to adequately heat the building in time.

Monday, February 23

Poles for the town's telephone system arrived, with the system expected to be in operation in a few weeks. Charles Turner would be in charge of the central office, which was planned for the Ritchie block.

A dog that made its way into the post office broke a window to get out. A show bottle and a large lamp were also broken. The dog had no tag – but it served as a reminder that a dog bylaw was needed.

Wednesday, February 25

The annual meeting of the Lethbridge branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society was held in the Presbyterian Church. John Duff was elected president, and the resident ministers of the town were named vice-presidents.

Thursday, February 26

Miners at the incline railway had a scare when a link broke between the two forward cars as they were riding up the bank. The miners jumped off the remaining six cars as they started down the hill. The cars also caused a scare at the bottom of the hill, where William Stafford Jr. helped Robert Sage, who had slipped as he tried to get away from the track, get out of the way.

James and Elizabeth Harper had a baby girl, Georgina.

Friday, February 27

George Robinson, a clerk at the post office, bought the book and stationery business of P.R. Neale.

Saturday, February 28

A public meeting was held at the AR&C's No. 3 boarding house to discuss politics. Charles C. McCaul, William Stafford, Malcolm Campbell, Mr. McDonald, Charles Magrath, and Mr. Bentley addressed the electors – and all supported D.W. Davis. Mr. McKenzie spoke in favor of James Reilly, the Calgary mayor. The meeting ended with three cheers for Queen Victoria and Davis.

Sunday, March 1

A.F. Tero, a watchmaker and jeweller from Regina, was preparing to open a store in Dr. Potts' old office.

Monday, March 2

Town council decided farmers in the area would not be subject to licence fees if they sold their produce and dairy products in Lethbridge.

Charles Farmer was sentenced to two months with hard labor for stealing a revolver from William Arrowsmith. Mr. Justice Macleod heard that the revolver, valued at $12, as well as $15 in cash, were found on Farmer.

Sherlock and Higinbotham's drygoods emporium opened next door to the post office.

Tuesday, March 3

Mr. Lane and Mr. Lambert of Chicago arrived in Lethbridge to look at the possibility of a business. If a suitable location could be secured, they said, they would open a grocery or crockery store.

Wednesday, March 4

The barracks mess room was filled for a smoking concert. The music was provided by members of the NWMP, with the K Division String Band opening the show with some lively music.

A girl, Helen, was born to Rev. Charles and Elizabeth McKillop.

Thursday, March 5

In the federal election, Lethbridge residents cast 277 votes for Davis and 103 for James Reilly. Davis took the seat by winning every polling division – including those in Calgary, where Reilly was mayor.

A son was born to Lawrence McEwan, a jeweller, and his wife Minnie.

Monday, November 9

Council decided the new fire hall would be a two-storey brick building with an iron roof. Part of the basement would contain cells and the upper storey would contain council chambers and two rooms for the clerk. The building was to be 28 feet wide by 36 feet long. Council decided to start seeking tenders for the fire hall.

A group of men headed south to help repair a bridge on the Great Falls and Canada Railway which had been destroyed by fire. Two trains a day had been using the route, so the stoppage – expected to be about four days – was a great inconvenience.

Henry and John Howard, who had been given the contract to plant trees in the public square, had all the holes dug.

Tuesday, November 10

Nora Clench was a disappointment in her Lethbridge concert – she failed to show. But local talent sprang into action. The splendid voice of Dr. DeVeber, a piano solo by Marjorie Sherlock, and a recitation by James Malkin were among the treats given.

James Fraser, son of John and Annie Fraser, died at the age of 19 years and seven months. He had suffered from consumption for about two months.

A girl was born to Francis and Mary Ellen Hooper/Hooker.

Wednesday, November 11

Lethbridge market quotations featured a ton of coal at $3.50, a ton of hay at $12 to $15, a pound of butter for 30 cents, a pound of cheese at 15 cents, and 100 pounds of potatoes for one dollar.

School children were given a holiday because the furnace was smoking so badly they could not stay in the rooms.

Thursday, November 12

Thanksgiving Day. Stores in Lethbridge were closed, but had been kept open later than normal the night before.

A union service of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches was held.

A shooting meet was held at the Alberta Gun Club practice grounds. Then, 20 horsemen took part in a coyote hunt. A football game followed.

Friday, November 13

Robert Sherlock was elected president of the Board of Trade, which was revived after several months of inactivity. John D. Higinbotham was elected vice-president. The major issue discussed was the possibility of a fence around the cemetery.

Saturday, November 14

William Oliver, who submitted a tender for $3,326, was awarded the contract to build the new fire hall. George Cody and G. Cluston submitted losing bids.

Sunday, November 15

A total eclipse of the moon was seen by many. When the eclipse began at about 5:50 p.m., the moon was obscured by clouds, but they soon cleared, allowing the phenomenon to be seen.

The post office lobby was opened to box holders for one hour, from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., on the order of the post office department. The opening was to be done every Sunday.

Monday, November 16

Park Lowther, a butcher, was named select councillor of the new Progress branch of the Royal Templars of Temperance. Thomas Glenwright, a blacksmith, was made vice-councillor, with Rev. Charles McKillop as chaplain.

Rail traffic was disrupted when an engine jumped off the rails just east of the station.

Tuesday, November 17

Thomas McCaugherty suffered a compound fracture of one of his legs when he fell off his wagon near Kipp. One of the wheels of the wagon rolled over him.

A horse was killed when seven loaded cars of coal went hurtling down the incline railway. About 20 miners were briefly trapped inside the mine at the bottom because of debris from the drift, which collapsed. The men were warned not to follow loaded cars up the incline.

Wednesday, November 18

Mrs. A Moran gave birth to a daughter.

Mr. Rowley on the violin, accompanied by Fred Ahlin on piano, entertained at the library hall.

Thursday, November 19

Town council suspended its pound bylaw in respect to cattle. Council members felt it would be almost impossible to keep cattle out of the town during the winter, so the bylaw should not be enforced until March 1.

Friday, November 20

The game of crokinole – said to be all the rage down east – arrived in Lethbridge. Little and Cleveland's store was reported to have a good stock of the boards.

Saturday, November 21

Members of the COF organized an oyster supper at Riverside Park. About 20 people gathered at the Park Hotel where the hosts were Joseph and Mary Noel.

Sunday, November 22

Samuel Brady, a baker, and his wife Annie gave birth to a daughter.

Monday, November 23

The foundation for the new fire hall, at Ford and Smith streets, was being dug. The first of two concerts to raise money for the new hospital was held. The second was set for the next day.

Tuesday, November 24

Council decided to advertise for a block of at least 10 lots within town limits for the site of the new court house.

Wednesday, November 25

E.T. Saunders again assumed proprietorship of the News.

The Masonic Ball was held. The evening's entertainment consisted of 24 dances.

Thursday, November 26

Little and Cleveland ordered more crokinole boards because the first batch had been sold out. The game was taking Lethbridge by storm – and replacing cinch and poker as the games of choice.

Friday, November 27

Star gazers, fresh from watching the total eclipse of the moon, were out again in force for a meteorite shower. It never showed.

Saturday, November 28

The crokinole craze was getting a bit of competition from new games being sold in Higinbotham's store. Cuckoo and Tiddly Winks were proving to be hot sellers.

Sunday, November 29

Another windy day in Lethbridge – and the new trees in the public square were being blown over.

William Henderson and his wife had a daughter. Henderson was proprietor of Lethbridge House.

Monday, November 30

William Colpman who had secured a leave of absence from council for the remainder of his term, left for an extended visit to the Old Country.

Two major social events were held – an evening of dramatic entertainment to aid the library, and a St. Andrew's Supper.

Tuesday, December 1

The Canadian Pacific Railway advertised a special on train tickets during December. The price of a return ticket between Lethbridge and Montreal was set at $62.50.

Wednesday, December 2

Council's decision that the pound bylaw would not be enforced through the winter drew criticism from an unexpected source – the Howard brothers. Their landscaping contract with the city specified they would be paid according to the number of trees still alive on the public square a few years hence. As long as the bylaw wasn't being enforced, they were losing money – because cattle were knocking the trees over.

Thursday, December 3

Ben Whitney was starting to put a fence around the cemetery grounds. He would get $400 for the work, although the Board of Trade had less than half that amount in its account. A drive was planned to raise the remainder before the end of the month, when the work was expected to be finished.

Friday, December 4

An artesian well, which would provide the town with a steady flow of water, was being considered by members of the Board of Trade. The well would be drilled within town limits during the winter. Board members felt the well could be completed at minimal cost to the town.

Saturday, December 5

Lethbridge's Catholic school was much improved, according to the latest inspection. The school had 42 students in the senior department and 35 in the junior department.

Sunday, December 6

Skating on the river became a popular pastime, although skaters were being warned the ice wasn't really thick enough – and the water was too cold for a swim.

Monday, December 7

The town's chemical fire fighting apparatus was given its first major test – and failed miserably.

During the supper hour flames were noticed at the rear of the J.H. Lawrence furniture store at Smith and Redpath streets. High winds drove the flames to the Royal Hotel, about 20 feet away. The chemical apparatus was brought to the scene but was cast to one side as it proved to be useless.

The furniture store and the hotel collapsed within about 15 minutes. An adjacent building, owned by Thomas Denton and used by Agnes McNaughton as a boarding house, was also enveloped by the blaze.

A stable at the rear of the A. Macdonald general store also caught on fire as volunteers emptied goods from several stores that were threatened, including Little and Cleveland's drug store. Lawrence McEwan's jewellery store, the butcher shop owned by Park Lowther and Blair Carter, and John Hawley's hardware store. Some of the goods were stolen after they were piled on the street.

The butcher shop was torn down to try to stop the blaze from spreading, but the fire reached Macdonald's store, causing about $50,000 in damage.

Enough water was finally brought to the scene to fight the fire, and a brick building and wet blankets stopped the spread. High winds carried burning embers to other parts of town, causing several small fires.

Tuesday, December 8

Council's regular meeting was a day late, because its members had been fulfilling their civic duty – by fighting the big fire the night before.

A request from the NWMP that two streets be closed was approved by council. The land was needed for police use. One closure was between Ashmead Street and Coutts Street, south of the barracks; the other was Cutbill Street between the barracks and Courtland Street.

A bylaw that would allow the electric company to erect poles and wires was proposed by Charles Turner.

Wednesday, December 9

John Gurn's Winnipeg Restaurant offered an oyster supper, raffle and musical entertainment.

John M. Parsons, an agent for the Ronald Fire Engine Co., arrived in Lethbridge. He tried to arrange a town meeting, but had to settle for an address to council members. He told them that a hand fire engine with tanks or a complete system of waterworks and an engine would be the best choice for the town. No decision was made.

The Board of Trade decided to try to raise $3,000 by subscription to sink an artesian well. About $1,100 was raised in the first day.

Thursday, December 10

Hotelkeeper David Clark was trying to find two volumes of Stanley's Darkest Africa, bound in half leather, that had gone missing the night of the fire.

The Cosgrove family entertained in the building company's hall. The act featured a variety of musical instruments, from cow bells to tiny wine glasses, as well as a comedian.

Friday, December 11

The Howard brothers won, and the cattle lost, when council members finally relented and reconsidered their suspension of the pound bylaw. Cattle, they decided, would no longer be allowed to roam the public square.

The fire was still on the minds of council members, who talked about imposing tough new limits on construction in Lethbridge. Brick, concrete, or stone would be the materials of choice downtown.

A work crew left town to repair the Great Falls and Canada Railway bridge at Stirling, which had been destroyed by fire. Rail traffic was disrupted for just one day.

Saturday, December 12

Twelve-year-old Mary Jane Sewell, the daughter of pump inspector Jonathon Sewell and his wife Elizabeth, won $10 in a contest in Alicia Rookes's kindergarten. Eveline McKay, daughter of Daniel and May, placed second.

Sunday, December 13

The young daughter of Robert and Nancy Ripley died.

Monday, December 14

Charles A. Magrath left for Regina to take his seat in the territorial assembly. He was also on the committee of management for the opening of a new hotel in Winnipeg on Dec. 31.

Tuesday, December 15

Winnipeg businessman Alex Macdonald, the biggest loser in the big fire, had some good news as he worked taking stock in Lethbridge. He had won the mayor's chair in Winnipeg by a wide margin. Macdonald gave $50 to the Lethbridge fire brigade in thanks for its efforts the night of the blaze.

Wednesday, December 16

Most of the businessmen were getting back into action, restocking their stores, but Henry Bentley had decided he would not rebuild the Royal Hotel.

J.H. Lawrence was still debating what to do, and Agnes McNaughton had rented space in the Alphonse Hotel to continue her boarding house business.

Thursday, December 17

Dave Akers's ranch at Fort Whoop-Up, about six miles from Lethbridge at the junction of the St. Mary's and Belly rivers, was being advertised for sale for $2,000. Lawyers Conybeare and Galliher were handling the deal.

Friday, December 18

More than $300 was raised by members of the Knox Church Ladies Aid at a bazaar.

Saturday, December 19

It was a gorgeous day, with matches of lawn tennis taking place. But it was impossible to get a true reading of the day's weather, because the instruments – set up in the public square – had been broken. Henry Pace, who was in charge of taking the daily meteorological readings, said later he had seen someone running away from the site of the instruments.

Sunday, December 20

The new catalog from the AR&C library showed it had 522 volumes, including works of history, biography, travel and adventure.

Monday, December 21

Two companies were seeking permission to put electric lights into Lethbridge, and both said they could not give an estimate on cost until the new year. The delay forced councillor Charles Turner, who was involved in one of the companies, to drop out of the race for the mayor's chair.

Town council met, but decided to table several matters so they could be handled by the council to be elected in January.

A. Macdonald and Co. opened a new store at the corner of Smith and Redpath streets.

Tuesday, December 22

Emma Hipperson, 15-year-old daughter of Arthur Hipperson, received a gold watch and chain from the Knox Church congregation. The special presentation was made in thanks for her work as an organist.

Wednesday, December 23

The Bell Telephone Co.'s new list of subscribers showed there were 66 telephones in Lethbridge. Some of the smarter businessmen had even secured advertising space in the pamphlet.

Thursday, December 24

Frank Ford brought the body of a man to the NWMP detachment at St. Mary's, southwest of Lethbridge. Before the coroner could arrive to examine the body, however, Ford made a successful dash into the United States. It turned out the man had been murdered.

Syrup of Figs, which acts "in harmony with nature" to cleanse the system, was on sale at John D. Higinbotham's drug store. Bottles were 75 cents each.

Friday, December 25

Christmas Day. The weather was anything but pleasant, with a strong wind blowing all day. The News reported that private social gatherings and quiet family parties constituted the greater part of the day's enjoyment.

A dinner was given at the barracks for ex-policemen, and the Clark House and Lethbridge House gave public dinners.

Saturday, December 26

Lawyer William Galliher went to Macleod for a special sitting of court. A man had been accused of stealing a horse.

Sunday, December 27

John D. Higinbotham was chairman of the Presbyterian Sunday School's Christmas Tree celebration in the building company's hall.

The children gave a recital, then Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus arrived.

Monday, December 28

Henry Bentley won the 1892 mayor's chair by acclamation on nomination day.

Thirteen people were nominated for council seats. They were Fred Bourdon, Malcolm McKenzie, Norman T. Macleod, William Henderson, Tom McNabb, Job Reed, Charles Magrath, John Bruce, John D. Higinbotham, William Colpman, M.S. Campbell, and J.L. Stovell.

Campbell later pulled out of the race. The election was set for the following Monday.

A Christmas Tree and entertainment under the auspices of the Methodist Sunday school was held in the church. Rev. J.H. Morgan received several messages from Santa Claus, who was on his way from England, before Saint Nick finally arrived.

Tuesday, December 29

The building on Round Street that had been torn down the night of the big fire was being rebuilt.

The building housed the Park Lowther and Blair Carter meat market, and was owned by G.W. Robinson.

Wednesday, December 30

Herbert Martin said he would seek a seat on the school board. Three new trustees would be elected on Jan. 7, with two current members staying on.

Thursday, December 31

The pipes leading from the tank to the boiler in Fred Bourdon's bathroom were frozen when a fire was started under the boiler. The resulting explosion blew down a partition between the bathroom and Armstrong's saloon. There were no injuries.

A ball was held in the building company's hall. The function was organized to raise money for the lacrosse club.

ROYAL HOTEL.

Having leased the above well known Hotel, and refurnished it throughout, I am now prepared to furnish first-class accommodation for the public.

The Bar will always be found well supplied with the choicest brands of Cigars and Soft Drinks.

Henderson's Directory

The following is a transcript of the Lethbridge listing from Henderson's Manitoba, Northwest Territories and British Columbia Gazetteer and Directory for 1891, published by

*The Henderson Directory Co., Winnipeg.
The directory has been reproduced on microfiche as part of the Peel collection.
Spellings are as they appear in the directory.*

Lethbridge

A mining town incorporated February, 1891, at the terminus of the Alberta Railway and Coal. Co., 110 miles from Dunmore station, on the main line of the C.P.R. 10 miles east of Medicine Hat, and is 28 miles east of Fort Macleod. Has a board of trade; semi-weekly newspaper; Presbyterian, Methodist, Church of England, and roman Catholic churches, and public and R.C. separate school. Telephone, public library and reading room. Masonic Lodge, Oddfellows, Knights of Pythias and Foresters, and Sons of Temperance. Has money order post office, express and telegraph offices. Pop. 2500. The principal industry is the coal mine, worked by the Alberta Railway and Coal Co., who also have a saw mill and the terminal shops of their railway here. There are other coal mines in the vicinity, and cattle ranching is extensively carried on.

Springhill relief

A fund-raising campaign started in Lethbridge days after an explosion at a mine in Springhill, Nova Scotia, killed more than 100 men on Feb. 21, 1891.

Many of Lethbridge's miners had moved there from Nova Scotia the November before, and had friends and relatives among the dead. Brothers of at least two Lethbridge residents, Frank Crawford and Angus Corrigan, died in the Springhill blast.

Lethbridge Mayor Charles A. Magrath sent a cheque for $1,622.30 to Springhill on April 17.

This index of contributors is based on a list that appeared in the Lethbridge News on April 25, 1891.

Some names appear more than once – possibly because some people gave more than once, or possibly because two people had the same name. Not all of those listed were Lethbridge residents.

Dominion Census

This is an index to the 1891 Dominion Census, Lethbridge Sub-District, Alberta, Northwest Territories.

Enumerator W.S. Heron started a list of people in the Lethbridge area on April 10, 1891, and completed it on July 1.

The census for the Lethbridge sub-district includes 2,842 names on 114 sheets. The area covered – basically, from Lethbridge south to the United States border – was huge, measuring at least 50 miles north to south, and includes the Lee's Creek Mormon settlement, now known as Cardston.

The census itself has much more information than appears in this index. It is available on FHL microfilm 1465850 or National Archives of Canada microfilm T-6425. This census has also been indexed in the Alberta-wide index published in 1998 by the Regina branch of the Saskatchewan Genealogical Society. The SGS index also has more information than will be found here.

Spellings are as they appeared in handwriting. In some cases, this means three different spellings for one family name.

There are four columns of information – name, age, birthplace and page on the census where the entry will be found. A (P) means the person was a member of the North West Mounted Police.
